Belmont Officer Sues for Salary

Suit was filed in the Superior Court of this county this week by H. C. Caldwell, formerly chief of police of Belmont, against the city of Belmont for $1050 alleged to be due him as salary during the time he served as chief of police.

Caldwell was appointed when Belmont was incorporated as a city in 1927. He served from June 1, 1927 to December 31, 1927. When Belmont was declared by a decision of Judge Hudner to have been illegally incorporated, all city employees were without pay as the city government could levy no taxes. Judge Hudner's decision was reversed recently on appeal and the city government began to function again after a lapse of two years.

Caldwell claims that he was to have received $150 a month, and is suing for seven month's salary.

Chinese Gardener, Discouraged, Ends Life With Pistol

With a bullet wound through the head and a .3 calibre pistol lying alongside, the body of Chang Ng., 55, Chinese flower raiser, was found in his cabin in the hills west of San Carlos yesterday afternon shortly after 10 o'clock. The body was discovered by a nephew of the man, Chan Tin Jin, who worked for his uncle. Jim notified Chief of Police Edward Wheeler of San Carlos, who in turn called Sheriff James J. McGrath. The latter with Chief Wheler, Deputy Sheriffs Joseph Meeks and Lawrence Nieri, hastened to the scene and after an investigation decided that the case was one of sucide. The body was taken in charge by Deputy Coronor E. C. Alber and removed to the James Crowe undertaknig parlors in this city.

According to information furnished Sheriff McGrath by a countryman of Chan living close by, the Chinese gardnerer had lost considerable money in his business venture at San Carlos and of late had appeared very dispondent.

Jin, the nephew, told the officers that he was working near the cabin about 1 o'clock when he heard a pistol shot. He rushed to the cabin and there found his uncle lying in a pool of blood.

When the officers arrived at the cabin, the nephew was applying some Chinese first aid in the hopes of reviving the relatives. He had killed a chicken and had placed the dead fowl against the wound in the head in an effort to staunch the flow of blood.

Redwood On For New Federal Postal Building

Congressman A. Free Gives Assurance In Letter

Redwood City is on the list of communities recommended for a new postoffice building. This is the asurance given by Congressman A. M. Free of this district in a communication this week to E. B. Hinman, secretary-manager of the local Chamber of Commerce. Hinman on December 6 had written Congressman Free asking for the status of the postoffice situation here.

Congressman Free's letter to Secretary Hinman reads as follows:

Washington, D. C.
December 11, 1929.

Mr. E. B. Hinman,
Secretary-Manager,
Redwood City Chamber of Commerce,
Redwood City, California.
My dear Mr. Hinman:

Let me acknowledge receipt of your letter of December 6th.

For several years I have been quietly working in the interest of Federal buildings throughout my district, and among the towns which I have recommended has been Redwood City.

Some years ago Congress passed an act requesting the Postmaster General and the Secretary of the Treasury to submit, from time to time, a list of proposed locations for Federal Buildings. These lists have been submitted to the Committee on Public Buildings and that committee has, each year, recommended a certain amount toward the building of this program.

The President recently urged a speeding up of this program. Redwood City is on the list of those locations which will be taken care of in due time. There is nothing particularly that can be done that I have not done and I have purposely not given much publicity to the fact about a particular community being included in the program as I realize comumnities are apt to get excited and bring a lot of unnecessary agitation.

You can assure the people of Redwood City that Redwood City is on the list of those communities to be taken care of and as the money becomes available the buildings will be built, and if Redwood City will have a little patience, in due time I will be able to secure for them a nice building for the housing of all Federal activities of the community.

With kindest regards, I remain,
Very sincerely yours,
A. M. FREE

Benson Will Fight Started by Brother

The will of Charles C. Benson, who died here on June 14, 1929, has been attacked in a contest filed this week in the Superior Court, by Asa E. Benson, a brother, living in Augusta, Maine. The brother charges that J. F. Parkinson, of Palo Alto, whom Benson in his will calls "an old friend," was a comparative stranger, but used undue influence to be made the largest beneficiary of the will, being given a bequest of $12,000. Parkinson was also named as executor of the will.

Judge George H. Buck has named Thursday, January 16, as the time when heirs under Benson's will may appear and show cause why the will should not be set aside in favor of the brother. In his will Benson left his brother only $1000, of his $40,700 estate.

The heirs under Benson's will are: J. F. Parkinson of Palo Alto, who was left $12,000; Frank Bauman, Redwood City, $500; Miss Elnor Root, Redwood City, income from three houses and lots here; Julia Johnstone of Los Gatos, income from one house and lot; Asa Benson and his wife, Gladys, $1000 apiece; Mrs. Gladys Metcalf of Augusta, Maine, andg the followin neyhews and nieces of Gardner, Me., Beatrice, Florence, Winifred and Carroll Benson.

BURLINGAME C. OF C. FILES PETITION TO REDISTRICT COUNTY

Document With 3,500 Names Attached Is On File in Office of County Clerk Elizabeth M. Kneese

An ordinance providing for the redivision of the county into supervisoral districts according to population was filed with County Clerk Elizabeth M. Kneese on Wednesday together with a petition signed by 3500 names asking that the ordinance be adopted. The ordinance and petition were filed with the county Clerk by John F. Davis, city attorney of Burlingame Mayor C. A. Buck of Burlingame; George W. Williams, president of the Burlingame chamber of commerce; and Frank McVeigh, secretary-manager of the same organization.

The petitions have been circulated through the eastern side of the county for several weeks. The work was done by a committee consisting of George W. Williams, chairman, Fred Peterson, John F. Davis, J. D. Bromfield and A. B. Cargill.

In the petition the signers ask that the board of supervisors pass the proposed ordinance as presented or submit it to the people of the county at a special election. The object of the petition is to secure for the densely populated sections of the county equal representation on the board of supervisors with the sparsely populated districts.

The present districting ordinance was adopted on September 16, 1895. Since that time the centers of population in the county have shifted to such an extent that a few hundred are represented by a supervisor in some districts while many thousands have the same representation on the board from other districts. It is to correct this condition that the petitioners are presenting the proposed ordinance.

In the proposed division of the county the first of the five districts which the county is divided contains, Colma, Daly City, South San Francisco and San Bruno. The estimated number of voters in this section is 6,686. The second district would contain Lomita Park, Millbrae and Burlingame. The estimated number of voters is 6,51.

The third district would include San Mateo, Hillsborough and Beresford. The voters are estimated at 6,148. The fourth district would be made up of Redwood City, San Carlos and Belmont, with 5,554 voters. The fifth district would contain all the western section of the county and all territory south of Redwood City. In voting population is estimated at 4,920.

The average for each district is as near as possible to 6000 voters. to meet the legal requirements. The proposed plan approximates an average of this figure without dividing any city or incorporated territory, which is the great objection to the present plan that divides the city of Burlingame, with half of its population in the first and half in the second township.

In the first township the present precinct of San Pedro, which is the northermost precinct on the coastside, would go to the fifth, or coastside district. The first district would lose Lomita Park, Millbrae and the north half of Burlingame. These, together with the south half of Burlingame, will constitute the second and largest district from the standpoint of population.

The third district will include Hillsborough, San Mateo and Beresford, which at present, together with part of Burlingame, are in the second district, but will give Belmont and San Carlos, at present in the second township, to the fourth or Redwood district. The fourth township will include these two and all of Redwood City.

The fifth township will extend from San Pedro on the north end of the coast side to the extreme southern end of the coast side, including the territory of San Pedro, Salada Beach, Halfmoon Bay, La Honda, Purissima, San Gregorio, Rockaway, Granada, Montara, Moss Beach, Princeton and Pescadero, and also will include much of that territory that is now in the Redwood district, including Ravenswood, Atherton, Menlo Park, Fair Oaks, North Palo Alto, Woodside and Portola.

The filing of the petition is the result of a long drawn out effort on the part of residents on the eastern side of the mountains to have the supervisorial districts changed. When requests to the board of supervisors failed several years ago, owing to the fact that an affirmative vote on the part of four of the five members of the board would be necessary to make the change, and this could never be obtained, the dissatisfied persons tried to force the board through court action. This also failed when it was found that the constitution provided that the board may redistrict the county, but fails to state that they shall be compelled to do so.

As a last resort the Burlingame Chamber of Commerce began the circulation of the petitions to place the matter before the supervisors as an initiative measure. If sufficient names are found to be attached to the petition the board has two courses open to it. It may either pass the proposed ordinance or submit the matter to the people at an election. After the ordinance is passed either by the supervisors or by the people at an election, thirty days must elapse before it goes into effect.

Deputies in the county clerk's office are now busy checking over the signatures to the petition. The law provides that in order to place the matter before the people as an initiative measure, that the signatures of twenty per cent of the registered voters of the county must be appended. This would make 3252 names necessary and would allow a large number of names now on the list to be disqualified. However, if the list is found to be insufficient, Attorney Davis will be allowed to file a supplementary list. For this purpose he has several hundred more names ready to file as required. The county clerk is allowed ten days to check over the signatures.

Kiwanians Have Boys As Guests At Club Party

The Redwood City Kiwans Club entertained a large number of boys of Redwood City at a Christmas dinner and party, held in the cafeteria of the Sequoia high school, Wednesday. Turkey and all the "trimmin's" were served aplenty, by Lenghlen and Mrs. Crockett, in charge of the cafeteria, they being assisted in the serving by a dozen high school girls.

Santa Claus appeared on the scene at the close of the eats and distributed gifts, candies and nuts to the boys. President Carl Wagner presided at the gathering, which was voted one of the most successful held this year by the club.

The party was in charge of a committee consisting of C. M. Doxsee, Harry Gelbmann and Z. T. Thorning.

The club will hold a Christmas party for members at the Sequoia hotel, next Tuesday, the regular meeting being advanced one day on account of Christmas falling on Wednesday.

TWO CARS BUMP IN HIGHWAY COLLISION

Slight damage was done to two cars in a collision at the intersection of El Camino Real and Broadway, Wednesday at noon. One of the cars was driven by Mrs. Rose Wenz of Oxford street. The other by Bertram Deffley of 16 Diller street.

Mrs. Wenz was turning from the highway on Broadway. Deffley was going south on the highway. His car struck the running board of the other car as it made the turn. The accident was investigated by Officer Thorpe of the Redwood City police.

Junior Red Cross Spreads Christmas Among Unfortunate

Redwood City's Junior Red Cross, through its council, has done much to bring happiness during the holiday season.

The Lincoln school provided 95 Christmas boxes for the various institutions in the county. These boxes were well filled with toys, candy, games and books. They were turned over to Mrs. Alfred Whiting, chairman of the institutional relations for the County federation, who gave them to Miss Florence Kreiss for distribution.

The McKinley school, as has been their custom for a number of years, made 50 boxes to go outside of the United States. These were sent to leper colonies in the Pillippines, Guam, Porto Rico and Japan.

Through the County Federation of Women's clubs, the council donated $25, to be used in bringing Christmas to the Veterans' Hospital in Menlo Park.

Sequoia High School did its part in bringing cheer and happiness.

The Sequoia Girls' Society, thru its five clubs, furnished gifts for twenty-five girls of the Sonoma school for girls, Holy Cross school, St. Mary's school and the Juvenile home. Seven elderly ladies of the Old Ladies' Relief Home, at Edenvale, were also taken care of.

Mr. and Mrs. A. E. MacIntosh, former well-known residents of Redwood City and for the past five years making their home in San Mateo, where Mr. MacIntosh was engaged in business, are here visiting with Mrs. Lottie Heise on Winslow street. Their son, William E. E. MacIntosh, is a senior at Stanford University.

Redwood Man Skipper On Burned Boat

Captain Stranquist Was in Charge of Skagaway

A Redwood City man was the skipper of the ill-fated Skagaway, which was piled onto the rocks off the coast of Washington Monday after the ship laden with oil had burst into flames. Captain Stranquist is a member of the plastering firm of Borquin and Stranquist of this city, but frequently takes ships to sea in order that his master's license may not lapse.

When one of the members of the crew reported to Captain Stranquist that the ship was afire, he states that he found the interior a roaring furnace. He ordered the ship beached on the rocks and sent out calls for help.

Before the fire was discovered, the captain claims that the crew were disorderly and intoxicated and on verge of mutiny. Before leaving port an argument between the captain and the first mate resulted in a fight and the mate put off the boat. Mrs. Stranquist, who spent the night before sailing aboard the boat with her husband, stated that she heard threats among the crew and that she warned her husband to look out for them.

At the federal enquiry held in Seattle on Tuesday, Captain Strandquist told the inspectors when he learned that the ship was all ablaze below deck and liable to explode, he ordered the boat put onto the rocks.

Peter Strom, first mate of the Skagway, testified before the inspectors that in his opinion the captain made a serious error in piloting the ship toward the rocky coast near Tatoosh island instead of steaming for Neah bay after the ship caught fire.

Strom testified Captain Strandquist violated an unwritten law of the sea when he failed to batten down all hatches and plug the ventilators as soon as he discovered the ship was afire, shortly before dawn Monday. His opinion was shared by the second and third mates, R. E. Cook and Peter Toft, respectively, who folowed him on the stand.

Chief Engineer William T. Comerford, however, suported the testimony of his captain, and declared he believed that Strandquist's method of attempting to control the fire in the hold and in steering for the beach were all that saved the ship from being consumed by fire.

The captain told the inspectors a strong east wind prevented the ship from reaching Neah bay, and said he steered for the shelter of the high cliffs because the fire could not be fought successfully in midstream.

The captain said after his arrival in Seattle that he believed the crew plotted against him since the ship's departure from San Francisco. He did not express the opinion at the hearing, nor did he comment on statements he was reported to have made that most of the crew were drunk.

Palo Alto Team Wins In Pioneer Football Series

Kit Carsons Defeat Forty-Niners 20 to 14

In one of the hardest played and most spectacular games played in the football league for boys under the program of the Young Men's Christian Association, the Kit Carson Pioneers of Palo Alto, won the championship of the 125-pound division for the south peninsula district, on Wednesday, when they played the Forty-Niner Pioneers of San Carlos, at the San Carlos field.

The Forty-Niners chose to kick at the start of the game. The Kit Carsons returned the ball twenty yards before they were downed and then by a series of rushes and end runs started a march down the field, making yardage four times before the Forty-Niners were able to stop them. This brought the ball down to the eight-yard line, where the Forty-Niners were held for downs and then the Kit Carsons broke through for their first touchdown, near the end of the first quarter. They converted, making the score 7 to 0 in favor of the Kit Carsons.

In the second quarter the Forty-Niners received and after returning the ball twenty-five yards started a series of plunges and end runs which put the ball over for a touchdown, which was converted. This tied the score up 7 to 7, at the end of the half.

In the third quarter the Forty-Niners received and after making downs twice, a long forward pass —Edling to Gover—put the ball over for their second touchdown. They then converted. With the Forty-Niners in the lead, the Kit Carsons put a lot of pep into their playing and within two minutes after the kick-off had put the ball over for a touchdown, but were unable to convert. This made the score 14 to 13 in favor of the Forty-Niners.

In the fourth quarter the Kit Carsons got the ball and by several end runs and smashes got through for another touchdown and then converted, making the score 20 to 14 in their favor. With five minutes to play the Forty-Niners received the ball, and made yardage once, and then were held by the Kit Carsons, who made yardage twice and then lost the ball to the Forty-Niners, who made a desperate attempt to get away, but were held. The final whistle blew with the ball on the Forty-Niners' 4-yard line.

S. F. MAN PURCHASES FLORAL SHOP HERE

The Highlands Floral Shop, at 2736 Broadway, was sold this week by Miss Lola B. Brown, to C. W. Timmins, of San Francisco. The name of the establishments has been changed to The Blossom Shop.

The new proprietor is a man of long experience in the floral business, having been until recently engaged in that work in San Francisco. In his new establishment he will specialize in distinctive boxes of flowers, party and table decorations and corsages. A delivery service will be maintained.

W. P. Surveys For Bridge To Connect With Main Line Here

Bridge To Be Built North of Vehicular Span

Surveys for the Western Pacific bay crossing to connect its Redwood City extension with Niles on the present main line have been completed and, according to R. J. Taylor, head of the surveying party, the proposed bridge wil cross the bay north of the Dumbarton highway bridge.

Officials of the Western Pacific have always maintained that the railroad would construct its own bridge, provided that suitable arrangements could not be made with the Southern Pacific for the joint use of the Dumbarton cutoff.

During the Interstate Commerce Commission hearing on the Western Pacific application for permission to build the Redwood City line from was only incidentally referred to, but the I. C. C. examiner asked if such an arrangement would be made.

The reply was that the final determination of the matter rested "with the Southern Pacific and the Interstate Commerce Commission."

It has been pointed out that the I. C. C. has the authority to order the two rival rail systems to "get together" on the matter of joint use of the Southern Pacific's Dumbarton cut-off bridge.

That the proposal to build its own bridge may be "a bargaining gesture" has been the general belief of many familiar with the railroad situation down the peninsula.

Both the companies would be in excellent position to bargain, it has been said. The Southern Pacific, it has been pointed out, could ask for joint use of the Western Pacific's lines between Redwood City and San Francisco and thus relieve the present peninsula lines of the freight traffic. In turn, the Western Pacific could ask the use of the present Dumbarton bridge.

Yomecan Club Hears Talk On Chemistry

Research work at Stanford was the topic of the speaker at the Yomecan Club meeting, Wednesday evening at the Sequoia Hotel. Elmer Tesche, a graduate students, who is doing research work along the lines of chemistry, told of a number of the research project which are being carried forward at this time by various men and the value of such work. The talk was very much appreciated by the club.

The next meeting will be held on Thursday evening, instead of Wednesday, because of Christmas. It was decided that the next meeting should be given over to the final details on the constitution in the place of having a speaker. Three applications for membership were made.

EARLY DAY HOUSE GIVES WAY BEFORE MODERN PROGRESS

Wreckers yesterday began razing the Gilbert home at the corner of Winslow and Bradford streets, one of the oldest houses in Redwood City. Built in the early sixties it was first the residence of S. S. Merrill, who conducted a drug store here in the early days and later became treasurer of San Mateo county. The merrills moved to Berkeley and the property was purchased by S. B. Gilbert, county surveyor, who with his family occupied the home for many years. The property is now owned by the Gilbert heirs.

The 1930 convention of the State Grange will be held in Napa.

City officials of San Jose are working on an ordinance which will ban unnecessary smoke from the city limits. The ordinance is expected to be quite stringent in its provisions.

For the first time in years, deer had been seen on the plains of Tulare County. Two does, thus far, have ventured from the hills, probably driven out by the dry season, one near Farmersville and one south of Visalia.

The Navy Department has no definite plans for use or disposal of the twenty-two acres of Housing Corporation property in Bay Terrace for the transfer of which a bill is pending in Congress, it was learned in a wire from Washington. It was thought the property might be utilized for an approach to the new causeway between Mare Island and Vallejo projected by the Navy Department.

Fire losses in San Jose during 1929 were nearly cut in half in comparison with the 1928 total, although there were 565 alarms as against 410 in the previous year, according to Fire Chief Charles Plummer's annual report. A total fire loss of $97,651.13 was reported, an average of $1.44 per capita, as against a loss of $178,490.34 in 1928, or $2.67 per person.

The city of Visalia will do 40 per cent more public work in 1930 than had been previously budgeted, city officials announced in reply from Visalia to President Hoover's call for increased public building. The 1930 public building program will amount to $140,000.

San Joaquin County's three Superior Court judges selected E. W. Drury from among thirty-two applicants to serve as the county's first jury commissioner and select the names of 400 prospective trial jurors from which jury panels will be drawn in 1930. The salary is $300 a month, not to exceed $1500 per year. Drury has resided at Stockton since 1880 and has been in business for forty-four years.

Ending one of the most prolonged routing controversies in state highway history, the State Highway Commission has approved relocation of the section of the Redwood Highway between Cloverdale and Hopland to follow the Russian river in place of the present route over the mountains. The river route is about three miles shorter than the present mountain road, provides excellent grade and alignment, furnishes a scenic highway and will readily respond to future widening.

Radio merchants of Redlands have started another movement for an air-tight radio interference ordinance which will do away with the wrecking of radio reception by unshielded electric machines. The radio dealers held a meeting with G. R. Walters, radio inspector of Los Angeles, A. G. Farquharson, secretary of the Radio Trades Association, G. Rew and Leo Meyberg, also officials of the association, and tests were made in the business section showing the great interference from unshielded machines. Leaks and other disturbances were found in great numbers. The merchants will appear before the City Council and urge the passage of an ordinance.

Redwood City has on file a complaint with the railroad commission against the Pacific Gas and Electric Company, asking the commission to issue an order requiring the utility to supply all electric energy required by the city for municipal purposes to be delivered at one common meter on a wholesale basis. It is alleged that the company has refused to make such delivery to a common meter and is now delivering power to the city at several different points.

Bid openings and contract awards by the State Department of Public Works and the state architect set in motion a heavy winter building program. Major awards were as follows: Marin County—Construction of a bridge over Corte Madera Creek, at Greenbrae; awarded to the Butte Construction Company, San Francisco, at a price of $157,339. Shasta County—Construction of six small timber bridges east of Redding; awarded to R. B. McKenzie, Red Bluff, on a bid of $18,653. San Diego County—Construction of a new library and science building for the San Diego State Teachers' College; awarded to Pettiser-Hunt Company, east San Diego, on a bid of $182,930. Los Angeles County—Building of a physicians' cottage at the Norwalk State Hospital; awarded to GG. R. Hyatt, Alhambra, on a bid of $6439. Napa County—Construction of a patients' cottage at the Napa State Hospital; awarded to Grant H. Kress, Oakland, at a price of $47,200. The public works department also announced opening of bids on two road projects, with contracts to be awarded later.

The total of $1,139,851 was spent by the state during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1929, for support and improvement of its three corrective schools, a report by Controller Ray L. Riley on cost of government indicated. The total spent on Whittier State School was $413,196, with $144,398 spent on capital outlay and $268,797 for expenses. On Preston School of Industry the state spent $604,656, of which $391,806 was for general expenses and $212,850 for capital outlay. The Ventura School for Girls' total expense was $121,998, of which all but $189 was for general expenses.

Chico real estate salesmen and brokers will undergo examinations by a representative of the State Real Estate Commission in the near future, it was announced by F. W. Thompson, secretary of the Chico Real Estate Board.

Water shortage at the veterans' hospital, Livermore, resulted in the Alameda County Board of Supervisors consenting to allow the hospital the use of 50,000 gallons a month from wells on the Wetmore ranch. The hospital is to be assessed a $25 a month "standby" charge and 20 cents for each 1000 gallons used.

Completion of the work of the proposed San Rafael-Richmond bridge is expected in the latter part of 1933, according to George J. Calder, vice president of the American Toll Bridge Company, which will construct the span.

An application for the dissolution of the Modesto Creamery Company, with an authorized capital of $50,000 is on file in the Superior Court, William Mullin, John H. Dunn, George R. Goddard and Charles R. Tillson are directors of the corporation. H. M. Walthal is counsel for the petitioners.

The Vallejo city council voted to stop all boating, fishing and trespassing on the city property north of the diverting dam in Wild Horse Valley and at Gordon Valley. This is carrying out the suggestion of J. D. de Costa, the lower bay sanitary engineer, who was engaged by the commissioners to study the Vallejo water system.

Hunting in Gridley district has been practically stopped by lack of water. Gun clubs are unable to fill their ponds and rice fields are dry. A heavy rain, however, will draw large numbers of birds to the hunting fields and hunters are all ready to bag the limit right after the first good shower.

Alvin K. Matthews, formerly of Stockton and more recently of Santa Cruz, assumed new duties in Oakland, where he will be in charge of work in connection with the Luther Burbank Foundation Inc., a non-profit organization engaged in plans for taking over the home and gardens of the late Luther Burbank in Santa Rosa. The foundation plans to prevent the home and gardens from passing into private ownership and being commercialized. The home of the famous horticulturist will be maintained for the visiting public.

The famous Argonaut Mine at Jackson, scene of one of the worst mining tragedies in California history eight years ago, will be deepened 180 feet in search for new ore bodies, the State Mining Bureau announced. The present depth of the Argonaut on the inclined shaft is 5400 feet. Sinking operations are already under way on the new project.

Police believe they have broken up a copper wire theft ring with the arrest at Nimshew of Jack Burns and Guy Simkins, two of a gang of six men. The other four made their escape in the hills. According to Constable W. A. Ware of Paradise, who made the arrests, a large quantity of wire was found stored in the shack where the men were trapped. Numerous complaints of copper wire thefts have been received by police lately from Redding, Marysville and the local telephone company.

Los Angeles, lost in her battle before the United States Supreme Court to have railroads forced to build a $10,000,000 union passenger station in the Plaza there. Chief Justice Taft delivered the opinion of the high court, holding that the Interstate Commerce Commission was without authority to order the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe, Southern Pacific and Los Angeles & Salt Lake railroads to build the union station. For ten years Los Angeles has been fighting to have the railroads build such a station.

Faced with $50,000 loss in revenue through exemptions from gross receipts tax bases of mail contracts, the state considered possibility of tremendously larger losses if, by a constitutional quirk, the same principle is applied to rail line mail transportation. While Attorney General U. S. Webb disagrees with a recent court opinion holding that under the gross receipts tax on passenger and baggage carrying motor vehicles, contracts of stage lines cannot be used in computing taxes, he points out possibility that if this exemption is constitutional, the same privilege may be claimed by the rail lines carrying mail.

The Louis Hagen Post of the American Legion in El Cerrito is reported to be negotiating for the purchase of an old French chateau from Fred Gianella. The chateau containing 16 rooms is to be used as a club room by the veterans. Club rooms and living quarters for some of the members are planned.

Architects may form partnerships with persons who are not architects, Attorney-General U. S. Webb stated in an opinion, as long as they abide by certain professional requirements set by the 1929 statutes. The law permits such partnerships providing that the name of the architect shall appear as the architect on all instruments of service and that in no case shall the other members of the partnership be designated as architects. These must be designated under their true title. In many cases an architect associates in busines with a construction engineer or a building constractor. The State Board of Architecture insists that in such cases the specific qualifications of each partner be listed clearly for public reference. The Attorney-General declared that it was illegal for a construction firm to use the name of a deceased architect in the firm name under the impression that his services were still involved.

A thousand toy rifles were turned out during the first week's run at the Ashland-avenue shop of the Toy Craftsman, a company at Lindsay, that plans extensive manufacturer of the patented repeating rifle designed by Ben Fisher of the Strathmore district. Additional installation of machinery will bring capacity of the plant to 2000 of the toy guns daily. The little guns use rubber bands cut from inner tubes, as ammunition, the released bands flying fifty feet or more. E. J. Foote, proprietor of the Foote planning mill is in charge of the manufacturing end.

Plans are being completed for a one-story brick grammar school building to be erected in Red Bluff. It will contain 18 classrooms and an auditorium and will cost about $100,000.

Mt. Hermon Association, Inc., a charitable organization headed by San Franciscans and residents of the East Bay district, filed incorporation papers with the secretary of state. Announcing it will conduct a summer assembly and other meetings and conventions for evangelistic, biblical, missionary and educational purposes the association gave headquarters as Alameda county.

OLD-FASHIONED RECIPES

There are many dishes which are handed down from one generation to another in families, who enjoy some of the old-fashioned dishes occasionally.

Salt Fish Dinner.—Soak, simmer, and drain the required amount of boneless codfish, until tender. Serve either as whole piece on a platter with plenty of butter poured over it, or flake it and add a rich cream sauce with hard-cooked chopped egg added and a bit of minced parsley. Accompany the fish with crisp brown fried salt pork, diced buttered beets and carrots, small potatoes cooked whole, rolled in butter and parsley and cooked onions, also buttered. Serve a portion of fish, vegetables, pork and sauce to each plate.

Delicious Pudding.—Take one pint of fine bread crumbs, soak in one quart of milk for 15 minutes. Beat together until light the yolks of five eggs, add one cupful of sugar; stir in a tablespoonful of softened butter, add a bit of grated lemon rind, two tablespoonfuls of lemon juice and a pinch of salt. Mix with the milk and bread and add one cupful of coconut. Bake in a pudding dish until the custard is set in the center. Test with a knife—if the knife comes out clean it is ready to take from the oven. Cover with a meringue, using the egg whites beaten stiff, five tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar; beat until well blended. Heap over the pudding and sprinkle with more coconut and cover with powdered sugar. Brown in a moderate oven. Serve cold.

Chowder.—This is a distinctive new combination. One may use fish, fresh or salt; clams, oysters fresh or canned, or any fish food one desires. The method for preparing is the same. Try out two good slices of salt pork cut into fine cubes until brown; add two good-sized onions thinly sliced, and cook, stirring five minutes. Add six or seven potatoes thinly sliced after quartering, add salt and pepper and cover with boiling water. Simmer until the vegetables are done. Then add if salt fish, the well-soaked and shredded cod, or, if clams, fresh fish, parboil in boiling water, then add to the hot mixture. Bring to a boil and add a quart or more of rich milk; when simmering hot add six to eight milk crackers which have been softened with a little hot milk. Serve at once. Parsnips, diced tomato or corn may take the place of the fish if desired.

Marlboro Pie. — Take one cupful each of sifted stewed apple, sugar and milk, one-fourth cupful of butter melted, two beaten eggs, a little grated nutmeg and lemon peel; bake in a pastry shell as for custard pie.

Ordinary Foods.

Ordinary foods may be made extraordinary by the addition of seasonings and garnishment and the manner of serving. One of the ordinary dishes which is simple, easy to prepare as well as tasty is:

Apple Tapioca.—Take four tablespoonfuls of minute tapioca, add one-fourth teaspoonful of salt, and and one-third cupfuls of boiling water, cook twenty minutes or until the tapioca is clear. Butter a pudding dish and cover the bottom with apples cut into eighths, sprinkle with sugar and cover with a layer of the tapioca, repeat and place in the oven with a few apple quarters on top. Bake until the fruit is done. Serve with sugar and cream.

Dubarry Macaroni.—Cut four slices of bacon into small pieces and fry. Add one sliced onion and one can of tomatoes which have been allowed to simmer until reduced to half. Season with cayenne, mace, allspice and a bit of bay leaf, salt and pepper. Cook thirty minutes, then add two cupfuls of cooked macaroni and serve.

Halibut on Toast.—Melt one-fourth of a cupful of butter and add two and one-half tablespoonfuls of flour; when well blended add two cupfuls of milk and cook until smooth, then add two cupfuls of flaked halibut; season to taste and add one teaspoonful of anchovy essence. Serve hot on squares of buttered toast.

For a delicious filling for a white layer cake add drained grated pineapple to a boiled frosting. It may be used with powdered sugar if in a hurry.

A most attractive pear salad may be garnished with strips of pimento and dressed with a snappy french dressing. Serve with a dinner meat.

Horseradish Sauce.—Take one-half cupful each of sour cream and grated horseradish, salt, a little sugar and a dash of cayenne. Serve with fish or oysters.

Add a teaspoonful of anise seed to the jars of pickled beets when canning them. The flavor is especially pleasant.

"Aladdin's Modern Lamp"

By rubbing his magic lamp, Aladdin, famous in fairy tales, summoned a wonderful genie, a spirit of unlimited power, who carried out his every wish. Sparkling palaces gleaming with a thousand lights—a princess for his bride—wealth, luxury, power.

Aladdin's Modern Lamp—the fairy tale come true! Today we all have Aladdin's power at our command; such luxury and such inventions for our pleasure and convenience as even Aladdin did not dream of or hope for.

Light, heat, transportation, power. Our public utilities of today have placed millions of horse-power at our command to be summoned at our lightest wish. And more, they have made this vast power available to us at a cost within the easy reach of everyone.

The most successful people are those who have learned how to put these modern power-slaves to work for them; whose standard of living has been raised; whose pleasures have been increased, labors lightened, energies conserved.

And, as with the individual, so with the community. The outstanding community of today is the one whose people demand and make use of every modern convenience in lighting, heating, transportation and power; who invite public utilities to serve them, and make it attractive for these modern genii to gratify their every wish.

Are we, as individuals of this community, raising our standard of living and keeping our place in the march of progress by making use of the millions of horse-power at our command in

Christmas

"WHEN they saw the star they rejoiced with exceeding great joy."

So was it said of the wise men of old when they saw the star shining above the manger in Bethlehem nineteen hundred and twenty-eight years ago—and so may it be said today for wise men of all nationalities since that eventful morning have rejoiced in that a Saviour of the world has been born.

Christmas is a time of rejoicing and of love gifts. Such has it been since the wise men brought gifts of golf, frankincense and myrrh, and laid them at the feet of Jeus, the babe of Bethlehem, the Saviour of the world, the Prince of Peace.

Let us likewise show our love for Him by trying to bring happiness to little children; to those whose hearts are sad, and to those who have suffered misfortune, that our hearts may truly sing as the angels of old.

"Glory to God in the Highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men."

Christmas is a weird, unnatural season.

It has its joy, its sorrows and its worries.

Take Christmas cards.

The pleasant feature about Christmas cards is that when one is received several days before Christmas you don't have to worry about giving that person a present.

It has been a long time since Christmas was celebrated as it should be by all Christians.

To mothers and fathers of small children it means making the children happy.

To the young girls it means a series of dates, dinners and dances.

To father it means a vague wondering of how to pay the bills on January first.

To mother it means seeing the scattered members of the family gathering around the home table once more.

To the bootleger it means exceptionally good business for a few days—except the bootlegers of some communities whose style has been cramped by the authorities.

Christmas is a fine season for Business. People crowd into towns and cities and turn loose a flood of money.

The Spirit of Christmas has been commercialized, as has most other of emotions and institutions.

It is the season celebrating the birth of Our Savior, Jesus Christ, but who among us sit down and seriously think of That Man and the message he brought?

Each of us looks at Christmas differently, according to our station in life, the amount of available cash and the quantity or quality of our religion.

And it seems, as we said in the beginning, that the season brings joy, sorrow and worry —according to our environment, income or philosophy.

Is There A Santa Claus?

IT seems rather too bad that young Americans become sophisticated at so early an age now, that he loses faith in this pretty old Santa Claus myth at a time when normal children should have more imagination.

It is a pleasing sentiment that leads the sober old adults to work off this gentle fraud on the children. Literal minded parents may prefer to offer the gifts themselves and have the children realize from the start just where they come from, and they may argue that the children ought to realize all the good things they get from their parents.

But there is a fascination in the look of wonder with which the little child's eyes open when he is first told the Santa Claus story. It does him no harm, and perhaps makes him feel that the world is full of kindly souls that are working all the time to make people happy.

Take a cupful of forgetfulness of self, mix with it a good proportion of interest in others, pour in some milk of human kindness, season it with spices of bringing joy to others, bake it with fires of generosity, and, strange to say, it will produce a Merry Christmas, not only for those you help, but also for yourself.

Poetry is the attempt which man makes to render his existence harmonious—Caryle.

Upholds the Constitution

THE refusal of the United States Senate to seat W. S. Vare was a gross violation of the constitution and by this refusal a stain was placed upon the fair name of that august body which will take some time to remove.

Vare presented his credentials properly signed by the governor of the soverign State of Pennsylvania. That great state had elected Vare in a legal election. He received the majority of the votes of the people of the state and being qualified in every way Vare should have been seated. The senate in failing to accept Vare gave a direct slap to state rights and set aside the constitution of the United States as if it were a plaything not to be taken seriously.

It is true the senate is judge of the character of its members but where credentials are properly and legally presented it is dangerous precedent to set them aside.

The complaint against Vare was that over a million dollars were spent in his election. This may be true. But doesn't it cost every senator a vast sum to secure a toga? Publicity costs money these days. Newspapers have to be paid for their advertising. Radio advertising is a heavy drain and men are not watching polls for nothing. A state-wide campaign for a seat in the senate in a thickly populated comonwealth like Pennsylvania pulls heavily at the purse strings, as it did in the case of Vare, a wealthy man with wealthy friends who spent their money freely in order that the toga might rest on the broad shoulders of the man they loved and admired.

The senate in casting aside the will of the people of the great state of Pennsylvania offered an insult to the intelligence and honesty of the voters.

Among the twenty three stalwart senators who voted to retain Vare was Senator Samuel M. Shortridge of California. Not only did he vote for him but in an eloquent speech he asked for the support of the constitution of the country. He pointed out in strong language what the violation of that document meant to the people, but the great argument fell upon ears prone to listen to self interesting things and not to the voice of the people of Pennsylvania.

California is proud of its senator. All over the state Shortridge is being commended for his strict adherence to the constitution of the country and his fairness and justice in the Vare vote.

Country Press Stabilizes Nation

AT the conclusion of the greatest era of stock speculation in history, President Hoover checked mass hysteria by mobilizing industrial co-operation and showing the people that the business of the nation was on a sound basis. What he did was in line with the continuous educational work of thousands of country weekly and small daily newspapers which stand for national stability and industrial development.

These community newspapers devote much of their space to showing how the great bulk of the payrolls and smaller industries maintain business and employment at a normal level all the year round. Great corporations, enormous skyscrapers, ocean steamship lines, railroads, banking and utilities may be the backbone of the country, but the thousands of smaller payroll and industry towns in the country whose story is told week by week in the country press is the body of our ecnomic structure which gives the backbone life. Rural press circulation reaches a majority of working, thinking Americans in their homes and is the great national stabilizer.

The business stability of the nation depends, as President Hoover has said, on the pulse of the millions back in the country, surburban and interurban communities and does not exist by the fiat or the decree of the metropolitan brains and hearts and purse strings.

The Bible still outsells any book published, and if you want to know, it is still being read.

Correct this sentence: "I want you to make a fair profit, and I am not kicking on the bill."

This is the time of the year to decide what you will plant in your spring garden.

The man who looks 1930 in the eye with no debts behind him is sitting pretty.

Not every child in Redwood City has a ma with big enough stockings.

Well, one good thing, Congress will adjourn for Christmas.

Be courageous. Be independent. Only remember where the true courage and independence come from.—Phillips Brooks.

City Council Meet To Hear Protests Against Improvement

The city council met on Tuesday evening to consider and hear protests against the proposed improvement of certain streets in Stanford Park. The hall was crowded to capacity. In fact there were more outside than inside the hall. The meeting was a memorable one in that it was the starting of the street work in the municipality and from the heated discussion of the property owners the improvement of streets is to be fraught with difficulty and much hard work will have to be indulged in to iron out the various differences of the contending factions.

The first gun fired in the vexed question was in the form of a lengthy communication presented by James Armstrong, representing the Stanford Improvement Association. One hundred and twenty-one members signed the communication, asking that a full investigation be made before any further proceedings were made, that a committee be named from the association to confer with the council to make a study of the question and to report on February 15.

Two petitions were read from the property owners living in the districts where the proposed improvements are to be made. Both were similar in form and signed by a majority of the lot owners protesting against the proposed street work. The claim was made that the time was not ripe for such improvements, that the matter be postponed for a time and until the territory became more populous.

Three attorneys appeared for the protestants, J. J. Bullock, A. J. Stebenne of Redwood City and Loen David, assistant city attorney of Palo Alto. They took the floor and for over an hour oratory flowed freely and words were bandied back and forth with the council.

Bullock demanded that an estimate of the proposed work be brought forth, where upon the city engineer presented it. Its perusal showed the cost to be: pavement 15 cents per square foot, curb and gutter 80 cents per lineal foot, grading 3 cents per square foot; 18 inch storm sewer $3 per lineal foot; 24 inch $3.50 or about $17 for a 50-foot lot and $16 for side laterals where needed. A total cost of from $3.41 to $5.12 per front foot was estimated. The total cost of the entire project is $88,000. A reduction of fifty per cent was estimated on corner lots with side frontage.

All three attorneys agreed that the time for the proposed improvement was not ripe, that the matter go over for a period when there were more population. It was said the property owners were not given sufficient time to investigate the figures and the character of the proposed work. That they be given this time and that a full report be made of such investigations. Engineer Kneese was heckled by the attorneys but on taking the floor made a clear and precise statement of the proceedings urging that the street work be proceeded with as owing to the slackness of the times better prices could be secured now than later. The figures he had given were conservative and he believed the bids would be considerably lower than the estimate.

Commissioner Walker hoped that the work would proceed as he and the council had given the matter much attention. He declared the prices were reasonable and not extravagant as many property owners had thought. Councilman Blake declared he was a heavy property owner in the improvement district and he wanted the work to go on. He said the lot which he owned in the district was bought by his father in the early days. He favored the movement but desired all the taxpayers to be satisfied. Elliss approved of the improvement but was not in a hurry to ram the matter through. He was willing to wait until all were satisfied. Weeden thought the plans could be modified. He urged that the subject matter be referred to the city attorney and city engineer for adjustment. Bullock urged this as the solution of the problem. City Attorney Whitworth thought well of the suggestion, and so on motion the matter was referred to the council as a committee as a whole, and the city engineer and city attorney to make a report on Tuesday evening, January 14. The motion was unanimous.

There is a strong opposition to the campaign for street improvements but it is thought some adjustment will be made so that the dirt will fly in the Stanford Park section by spring.

Christmas Services at the Menlo Park Presbyterian Church

All the services at the Presbyterian Church next Sunday will be Christmas services. All the members of the Sunday School will bring their "Christmas Gifts for the Church" in red stockings and will hang them on a tree with appropriate ceremony.

At the eleven o'clock service the pastor will preach upon "Bethlehem Sleeps When the Star Appears." The evening service will be a candle service, and the singing of the Christmas hymns.

On Monday evening, December 23, the annual program of the Sunday School will be given. The program this year will be a pageant by the younger members of the school, assisted by Miss Esther Bearce, reader, and the regular choir. The pageant is entitled "The World's Children at the Manger." The usual decorated tree and other features will be present.

R. R. Crossing To Airport Sought

District Attorney Franklin Swart represented San Mateo county at a hearing Tuesday before the California Railroad Commission on a petition for the opening of Bell avenue in Beresford across the S. P. tracks. The crossing is intended to give access to the Curtiss airport at Beresford. In addition to the district attorney, Oliver Dibble, attorney for the Leslie Salt Company, Attorney Hoffman of San Mateo and Attorney Larson, representing the Curtiss Airport, were among the proponents for the crossing.

The matter was heard and taken under advisement by the commission.

PRINTING DEVELOPS AS TO BE LARGEST OF MANUFACTURES

SACRAMENTO, Dec. 11—(UP)—Printing and publishing is the leading manufacturing industry of California, doing a total annual business in the neighborhood of $92,753,000.

This is disclosed in statistics compiled by the research department of the California State Chamber of Commerce over a period of 18 years.

Printing and publishing has experienced a steady increase over the last 29 years, while other industries rose and fell with the times, the statistics showed. The average annual business for the years of 1923, 1925 and 1927 was $985,224,000 — nearly a billion dollars—for every kind of manufacturing industry.

Next to printing and publishing came petroleum refining, with a yearly average of $82,558,000.

There are 1,624 printing and publishing establishments in California, the figures showed. They employ 13,857 wage earners who earn a total of $27,339,163. Cost of materials aggregates $38,256,443; $143,-350,895 value or products, and $105,-094,452 the value added.

Third Man Caught On Suspicion Of Local Burglaries

Oliver Hamond, arrested in San Francisco, is suspected of being the third man wanted here in connection with a series of burglaries in this and in Santa Clara counties. Hammond is supposed to have been connected with burglaries for which William Sepulveda and Richard Rivera were arrested several days ago in San Francisco. All three will be tried in this county.

Buyer Asks Return Of Money Invested In Nerve Hospital

Charging that Mrs. Maud C. Reed had misrepresented the business done by her in the Nerve Rest Sanitorium at Belmont, in order to make a sale of the institution, Donald R. Smith, purchaser of the hospital began suit in the Superior court here this week to secure a return of money paid for the sanitorium.

According to Smith's allegations Mrs. Reed claimed to have had an income of $900 a month from the sanitorium. After conducting the business for a month, Smith charges that the hospital did not pay expenses. He seeks the return of $3,-500 down payment for the hospital. The sale price was to have been $16,000.

BOW AND ARROW EXPERTS BAG 200 - POUND BEAR

Frank Krum is an expert "trouble shooter" in the Graham-Paige service department at Portland, Ore. As the cars give little trouble, he had to hunt some, and the photo shows that he found it. Krum and his son, Carroll, age 14, met a 200-pound black bear, and Krum let fly an arrow, which only enraged Bruin. Carrol shot two more arrows as the bear charged on his father, who had fallen backward over a log. Then the elder Krum's second arrow ended it all.

RUNAWAY BOY RETURNED TO SANTA CLARA

LeRoy McGinnis, a young boy of Santa Clara was found by Redwood City police wandering about the streets without apparently any home. The police took the boy up for questioning and found that he had run away from his home about a week before in company with another boy and had gone to San Francisco. In the city his companion had been taken by the police and returned to his home. Young McGinnis escaped the attentions of the San Francisco officers and came to this city. He was returned to his parents who called at the police office for him.

Conditions Of Drinking Here Much Improved

Habitual Drunkard Now Past History In California

17, (UP)—Remember the pathetic little figure, garbed in calico, who timidly pushed through the swinging doors and across a beer laden room to sing—

"Father, dear father, come home to us now."

But times have changed and the bleary, red nosed renegade who drank his family out of house and home is gone. In his place is a new, and respectable, character.

Mrs. Anna L. Saylor, director of the state department of social welfare, is convinced that all such scenes are history.

"Welfare workers in the old days had much to contend with in this respect," she declared.

"The melodrama was exaggerated, but enough of that sort of thing went on to keep the workers busy. The corner saloon and all its accompanying misery was an ever present problem. We may think what we will of prohibition, but something has changed the old order and we no longer are confronted with that phase of life at its worst.

"County workers constantly tell me of improved conditions as I travel about the state. The old time drunkards are apparently pretty rare. Most of them are staying home and taking an interest in the family they once neglected.

"Instead of sitting around a table in a smoke filled room, drinking liquor, the fathers are sitting in front of their radio, tapping out melodies from the air ,rather than an accompaniment to the drinking songs of old."

These same county workers tell of apparently incorrigible cases, where a complete reformation has been effected. The houses are painted, they are paying off mortgages ,and cultivating gardens. The family which they once abused is now a pride.

An added interest in these individual cases in counties will soon be taken by the state ,when organization of the state probation division of the department of social welfare is completed under John Plover, state probation officer. Heretofore the state has had no direct connection with probation work, but Plover will act as a co-operative agency between the various counties in California.

Stanford-Army Game, Dec. 28th

Redwood City football fans will be out in force Saturday, December 28, when the West Point Army team meet the Stanford Cardinals in the Stanford stadium. Judging from the big demands for tickets, they will be sold out for this stellar attraction, which means that just 88,000 people will be on hand to see what Captain Christian Cagle and his cadets will be able to do against Pop Warner's mighty warriors and this year's conquerors of the "Bears."

The Army team, with 102 players, left on Tuesday from West Point in 13 luxuriously furnished cars for their trip to the far west. They will arrive here early next week in order to have plenty of time to try out the Stanford stadium.

Of course the eyes of the local fans will be centered on All-American Cagle, great gridiron sensation for two years. Despite the 28 to 0 victory of the Cards over the West Pointers last year in the East, Captain Cagle played a great game and had the Red Shirts worried until the very end. It will be interesting to see what Cagle will be able to do against the Stanford team this year.

Tickets for the Stanford-Army game are on sale at Gardiner's store on Broadway in this city. They are selling for $4 per.

FRED LAMB TO PLAY AT BIG S. F. AFFAIR

The annual entertainment, banquet and dance of the American Can Co. is to be held on Saturday evening, December 21st at the Elks Club on Post street, San Francisco. The banquet has been set for 6:30 and during the same a series of entertainment has been arranged which will embrace a large variety of professional talent, the entertainment finally being concluded with an elaborate chorus of attractive girls from the Blake Amber studios. Immediately following the entertainment and banquet the evening until 2 a. m. will be devoted to dancing. The music for the entertainment is being furnished by Fred Lamb's eight piece orchestra.

TEACHERS OF COUNTY MEET AT INSTITUTE

By W. J. SAVAGE

annual teachers' institute of county was called to order in uditorium of the Sequoia Union School at Redwood City last ay at 9:30 a. m.

y Jewett Abbott, by virtue of fficial position as county sup-nt, presided. This gather-luded 573 teachers; 336 repre-elementary schools and kin-ens, and 237 high schools and ior college. These have been the points of attack in the past and will be in the future. It is the responsibility of the teachers to be invited and use their ability to guard themselves against the pasasge of measures that may limit them in continuing their great work. Mr. Cloud concluded saying that the California Teachers Association had 3600 members last year and expected 40,000 speaking he had to prepare to go to speakingh e had to prepare to go to Monterey to continue his work.

The next speaker was Vierling Kersey, State Superintendent of Public Instruction, who had just come from a national meeting of state superintendent, of which he said that every trend indicated more co-operation of all interests, respect for law through the schools from the lowest to the highest and contact wherever and whenever possible with every agency that improves the public conception of morals. Right living arises from a healthy condition of the mind rather than from the enactment and enforcement of laws.

The Institute was then turned over to the San Mateo County Teachers' Association. President James Ferguson of the Jefferson Union High School took the gavel. Knowing his time was limited, the reading of the minutes was dispensed with. The treasurer read his report showing about $600 in bank and no need of dues for another year. The committee on Teachers' Pension: Harry Steinmetz, Guy J. Roney and John Gill submitted a report in the form of a questionaire which was adopted. The following were nominated and elected as officers for the ensuing year: President, A. C. Argo, principal Sequoia Union High School; Vice-president, Eleanor Freeman, chief rural supervisors; secretary-treasurer, H. C. Hall, district superintendent of San Bruno. The following were elected delegates to the California Teachers' Association: H. C. Hall, John Gill and Lewis E. Adams.

For an excellent luncheon served in the grand dining room of the Sequoia Union High School by the students, all the teachers were very grateful. It was perfect in every respect.

The afternoon session was opened by two well rendered solos by Miss Mary Ball. Rudolph D. Lindquist, assistant superintendent of Oakland, spoke on "Class Room Activities," showing a number of pictures done by young children as evidence of what they could do when permitted in the right way. He advocated freedom to think and do, so that children would go to school to do something and not to void it, as is too often the case.

Henry C. Morrison, University of Chicago, spoke on "Plan of Education" saying that no plan for such could be devised and carried out successfully as teachers had to deal with human beings and necessarily had to provide for them as they presented themselves, sometimes one way and again some other way.

Principal A. C. Argo and his associates were very gracious in showing the new school buildings to the teachers. They dod everything reasonable to make them feel that they were welcome guests. The second and third days of the Institute took place in Oakland with the teachers of the other bay counties.

Iceing Terminal To Be Ready For Next Year Crops

Refrigeration Plant In San Francisco Under Way

SACRAMENTO, CAL., December 17, (UP)—California farmers will have a shipside refrigeration terminal in time to handle their perishable chops next season.

The State of California expects to purchase Mission Rock, much-disputed point on the San Francisco waterfront, whenever the state harbor board can get the private owners to agree upon a "fair price."

These assurances were given to members of the California Farm Bureau Federation by Governor C. C. Young ,in a letter to Alex Johnson, secretary of the farm bureau, made public today.

"In my estimation Mission Rock is valueless to any private owner," said the governor. "If a private individual were given the property for nothing, I am satisfied he could not in any way develop it to make it pay.

"Nevertheless, I believe the State should own this property. First, because I believe that all the harbor front should be public property; second, because the state and the state only can purchase the rock proper from the fereral government and build the connecting pier necessary to give it any value; and finally, because only these advantages which the state alone possesses will justify its permanent improvement, such as may be made possible by the harbor board bond issue to be voted at the next election.

While negotiations for Mission Rock proceeded, refrigeration facilities must not wait, the governor declared.

"With this in mind, we are now equipping a building, already constructed upon one of the state's piers, with the finest of cold storage facilities ,and shall be ready for the grower as soon as his produce is ready for delivery," he continued.

"Through the state's ownership of this terminal warehouse, we are able to give shipside refrigeration one year earlier than we could have on any other existing pier, and three or four years earlier than on Mission Rock, even if we owed it today.

"The main point ,however, is that the producer will have shipside refrigeration this coming year, and that it has been provided in the only way possible. The greatest single problem of the California agriculturist is the profitable sale of his produce, and I am looking forward with the greatest hopes to the immeasurable benefits he may gain from his new markets beyond the seas."

State Places 2,530 Orphans In Good Homes

Thirtyeight Children In S. M. Co. Placed In Homes

SACRAMENTO, CAL., December 17 (UP)—Homes for 2,530 orphan children have been found in California since the state law requiring adoptions went into effect August 1, 1927.

In San Mateo county 38 children were placed by the state department of social welfare from the time the law was passed until November 1 of this year, an announcement by Mrs. Anna L. Saylor, department director, said.

The department is authorized by law to approve all adoptions, after an investigation by state agents or by those of the Native Sons and Daughters of the Golden West, or the House Finding Society.

"Adopting of children is no longer simply a matter of finding a child and taking it into the home," said Mrs. Saylor.

"All homes where children are to be adopted must first be investigated by the department or one of the other two agencies authorized by law. Agents are located at Sacramento, San Francisco, Fresno and Los Angeles. Within three months after filing of petition for adoption, the homes are called upon."

Such points as the economic and moral responsibility of the prospective foster parents are determined by the agent, Mrs. Saylor said. Cases are frequently found, she said, where persons desiring to adopt children are found mentally unequipped for the task.

"It is usually our endeavor to keep nationalities race and religions together," Mrs. Saylor declared.

"Protestant children may be placed in Catholic homes, or vice versa, but we prefer to find homes where the children may grow up in the belief of their parents."

Mrs. Saylor admitted that considerable trouble was had with persons resenting interference by the department in deciding whether they may adopt children.

"The only purpose of this law is to assure that children get into the right environment," the director said. "Our agents are reasonable people and if there is no reason why a couple should not adopt a child we give permission without delay.

Services Held For Pescadero Pioneer

Funeral services were held Wednesday morning from the James Crowe Company's establishment here for Alfred James Goulson, pioneer resident of Pescadero. Goulson, who was the father of Traffic Inspector Douglass Goulson, was a native of Wisconsin, and was 69 years of age. He had lived in Pescadero for the past 42 years.

Funeral services were conducted by the Rev. C. H. Stevens, pastor of the Congregational church. Interment was in the Protestant cemetery in Pescadero.

In addition to his son, Goulson is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Doris Vierra. His wife, Mrs. Jassie Goulson, passed away some years ago.

Local Man Aids Friends by Gift

Henry C. Finkler, for over fifty years the efficient secretary of the State Supreme Judges, believes in giving while living and not wait until after death to have his estate distributed, perhaps to those who do not merit or deserve it.

Mr. and Mrs. Finkler forty years ago purchased six hundred acres of land at Point Arena in Mendocino county. It is a mountainous ranch with plenty of water and much grazing land. This week Mr. Finkler made a deed of gift to the holding to a family that has leased it for many years. Mr. Finkler spent his vacation last summer at the ranch and was treated so royally by his tenant, whose family of fine boys and girls had reached the high school age, and wished to depart for some community having a high school, Mr. Finkler saw where he could benefit the family with such a commendable ambition and at once decided to make the gift.

In his declining years he will have the satisfaction in seeing these young men and women making their way with a good education in the world that now demands such an equipment. Mr. Finkler will receive his reward here for his generous gift. If other men of wealth would follow the example set by Mr. Finkler the world would be better and wealth distributed where it will do the most good.

Playing a faster brand of hoop binging, the Menlo firsts tucked a comfortable lead under their shoe strings and plugged along at a safe margin.

Gradually the Varsity is coming into a body that somewhat resembles a team and they should show class by the P. A. L. opening.

High point claims were split between Leroy, Sequcia's acting captain, and Tod, J. C. captain, when they both tallied 8 points.

4,000 CRIMES A MONTH IS RATE OF CALIFORNIA

SACRAMENTO, CAL., December 17 (UP)—Californians are breaking the law at the rate of 4,000 a month.

Such is the report of Clarence S. Morrill, chief of the state bureau of criminal identificaton, who bases his figures on the number of fingerprints sent to him for filing.

Of the prints filed last month, nearly 2,000 were of persons charged with felonies, and of the total, 1,187 were of persons who had prior criminal records.

GOOD OF INDIVIDUAL TO BE AIM OF SCHOOL

SACRAMENTO, CAL., December 17 (UP)—Development of the individual pupil, rather than "mass education" is the new policy of California's public schools.

"The greatest loss which California can suffer," said Vierling Kersey, superintendent of public instruction, "is the failure of our youth to attain to that which it might have attained, had teaching and personal guidance been adequately provided."

For this reason ,teachers of the state will be asked to stress "life experiences," in school, by which the child learns by actual contact with experiences and prblems, said Kersey. Furthermore, all education will be for a "definite analyzed future, to fortify youth against future conditions."

Redwood Man Dies At Home Tuesday

Funeral services will be held tomorrow morning from the parlors of Layng & Tinney for John August Hinck, who passed away Tuesday evening at his home on Ramona street. Hinck was a native of Germany and was 71 years of age. For the past 23 years he has been a resident of Redwood City. He leaves a widow, Mrs. Katherine Hinck. Interment will be in Union cemetery.

LOCAL HAPPENINGS

Mrs. Elizabeth McEvoy left this morning on the Daylight Limited for Los Angeles to spend Christmas with Mr. and Mrs. Bavard Lalande.

Mr. and Mrs. Sam H. Winklebleck of this city are receiving felicitations on the birth of a son at the Mills Memorial Hospital in San Mateo Wednesday morning. The baby tipped the scales at 8½ pounds. He has been named Sam, Jr. The proud father is the publisher of the Redwood City Tribune. Mrs. Winklebleck before her marriage was Miss Violet Curran.

Mr. and Mrs. Philip Bray of Vera avenue are enjoying a visit from Mrs. A. Bray and Miss Carmel Bray of Oakland, mother and sister, respectively of Mrs. Bray. The guests are planning to remain over the holidays.

The Redwood City Woman's Club will hold an afternoon party at the club house on Clinton street Thursday, January 10. Mrs. Guy Kennedy and Mrs. B. Wellington Bray are in charge.

The home of the Rev. Carl C. Lundquist, pastor of the Swedish Lutheran church of San Francisco, was the scene of a pretty wedding last Saturday evening when Miss Astrid Uggeldahl of Atherton, became the bride of Emil Hendrickson of this city. The ceremony took place in the presence of a few close friends of the young couple.

Mrs. Hedrickson is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Axel Uggeldahl of Hango, Finland. She has been a resident of this country for the past five years, the past two years having been spent in Atherton. Mr. Hendrickson is the son of Mrs. Louisa Hendrickson of Jakobstadt, Finland. He is a well-known young business man of this city, having for several years been manager of the Redwood City plant of the Sudden Lumber Company. He is now one of the proprietors of the West Bay Lumber Company. He is also a prominent member of Redwood City Exchange Club.

Mr. and Mrs. Hendrickson are making their home in a pretty cottage on Nottingham avenue, Dumbarton Oaks.

Santa's Best Stories

The Rediscovery of Santa Claus

By Harold L. Cook

FOR years Mrs. Pendleton had not believed in Santa Claus herself, but she taught her little girl to believe in him. "It's a beautiful myth," she said to herself, "and I don't see any harm in it. In fact, it's really too bad there isn't a Santa Claus. Since I was a child I have never enjoyed Christmas so much as I used to when I believed in him."

Just at that moment Betty Pendleton returned from Sunday school. She was a pretty little girl with blue eyes and long blonde curls, but today the eyes were brimming with tears, and as soon as she came into the house she ran to her room.

"What's the matter?" Mrs. Pendleton called from the foot of the stairs. "What is it, Betty?"

Smothered sobs were the only answer, so Mrs. Pendleton ran up the stairs and into her daughter's room. She took Betty in her arms and tried to calm her, but the sobs continued uncontrolled for some minutes longer. Finally she was able to tell her mother what the trouble was. Her Sunday school teacher had just told the class that there was no Santa Claus, that he was only a myth, and that it was wicked for parents to teach their little children such a lie.

More sobs followed the broken explanation which Betty had given, and her little body trembled with convulsions of emotion. Mrs. Pendleton had to think quickly and clearly. What was to be done? The child was heartbroken, and was still so young it seemed a pity that her teacher had disillusioned her about one of the loveliest of childhood's fancies. Her mother could not very truthfully deny what the Sunday school teacher had said, and she did not want to teach her child to question the wisdom of her teachers. It all seemed a terrible predicament for Mrs. Pendleton.

But suddenly her mother instinct solved the problem, and pressing her daughter more closely in her arms she said, "Your Sunday school teacher isn't married, Betty. I guess she doesn't know all about such things. It's mostly fathers and mothers who really know about Santa Claus. Santa Claus is the personification of the Christmas spirit. He does not live at the north pole, as some people think, or if he does live there, he journeys each December throughout the world touching the hearts of people to awaken in them the Christ spirit of unselfishness and generosity. It is usually mothers and fathers who know the most about him, because they love their children unselfishly as Christ loved little children, but people who do not have any children themselves are also often permeated with this particular Christmas spirit of giving. Jesus said, 'Let not your right hand know what your left hand doeth' and only those who understand His words can know the real Santa Claus. Some people exchange gifts at Christmas, and for them Christmas has merely come to be a barter of presents. They like people to know who is giving something to them. But Jesus wanted giving to be done in secret, and Santa Claus is that secret joy of giving which animates all mothers and fathers and lovers of children at Christmas time. The Santa Claus you see on the street or in the stores or at a Christmas tree is not the real Santa Claus who lives at the north pole or elsewhere. He is a representation of him, however, and as such, he is just as real as anything which exists in this world. Your Sunday school teacher knows that just as well as I do, only she did not know exactly how to explain it to you."

Betty had ceased crying and had listened attentively to her mother. "So there is a real Santa," she said. And Mrs. Pendleton replied, "Yes, my dear, there is a real Santa, and when you came to live with us you brought him back to us after he had been away for many years."

That Christmas was a lovely one for all the Pendletons because at twelve o'clock on Christmas eve, Santa Claus came down their chimney and filled all their stockings full. Before he left, he drank the glass of milk and ate the apple which had been left for him, and then he hurried on to the houses of other people who believed in him.

Girls' Opinion of Christmas

Most girls have a candied opinion of Christmas.

"Merry Christmas" Made Him One of Party

FOR years the same old conductor had been on the local train. He knew every one by name, how long they would stay home, how their families were, what they were doing. He had been given a leave of absence this year. There was a new man in his stead.

The new man did not know any of the people. He had heard what friendly people there were on this route. He had thought it would be pleasant to take the trip Christmas eve with people about whom he had heard so much.

The engineer was so excited about it being Christmas and knew how excited those were on the train going home for Christmas. He knew how crowded the little stations would be at every place they stopped with those home people ready to welcome their families.

It was the engineer's way of saying "Merry Christmas" that the train pulled in five minutes ahead of time!

And then, as some one got off the train, "Merry Christmas" was sung out to the new man. And then every one sang out "Merry Christmas." No longer did the new man feel so out of it all. No longer did he feel a stranger.

That Merry Christmas greeting had made all the difference.—Mary Graham Bonner.

How Parisians Celebrate

Parisians celebrate Christmas eve with a joyful fete in the restaurants on the grand boulevard. All night the cafes are crowded with singing, gayly dressed people from all walks of life, even the poor clerk and the shabby artist from the Latin quarter managing somehow to save money for this yearly good time.

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

THE association of New Year's day with important events in American history goes back to its very beginning. In fact, the very name "America" came into being through association with an event which took place on January 1. In the latter half of the Fifteenth century a Florentine named Americus Vespucci drifted to Spain and, hearing of the discoveries of Christopher Columbus, resolved to seek his fortunes in the New world. So he visited Espanola (Hayti), went on a pearl hunting expedition with the Spaniard, Ojeda, in 1499, and on January 1, 1502, he discovered the Bay of Rio Janeiro in South America.

Sometime during his voyage he wrote a letter in which he called the western lands "Mundus Novus," instead of Asia, and some historians assert that Vespucci, before Columbus, discovered the mainland, that he was the first to realize that "Mundus Novus" was wholly distinct from Asia and was, in fact, a new world, and that therefore he has some claim to the title of "discoverer of America." But whether he deserved that honor or not, the fact remains that the new continent was to be known as "America" rather than "Columbus." And this is how it came about:

At St. Die in the Vosges mountains there was at the time Vespucci was making his voyage a little collegiate institute which was a center of geographical learning. Two of its faculty members, Mathias Ringman, a Latinist, and Martin Waldseemuller, a geographer, were preparing a new edition of Ptolemy's "Geographia." Before it was published, however, they printed a little essay under the title of "Cosmographiae Introducto," to which they added the letter of Vespucci. It was in this essay that Waldseemuller, after describing the three continents of Europe, Asia and Africa, then gave an account of the voyages of Vespucci and closed by saying "The fourth part of the world having been discovered by Americus it may be called . . . the land of Americus or America." The suggestion met with favor, and although at first the name was confined to South America, it was later applied to both western continents. And thus, whether rightly or not, was the fame of Americus Vespucci perpetuated on the maps of the world.

The next great epoch in American history in which several important events were linked with New Year's day was the American Revolution. On January 1, 1735, there was born in Boston to a French goldsmith named Apollos Rivors (who, however, changed that to Paul Revere soon after his arrival in America and his marriage to Deborah Hichborn) a son who was named after his father. Young Paul not only followed his father's trade and became an expert in it, but he showed his versatility by trying his hand at many other things. He became the foremost engraver in America, he was a cartoonist and a poet, he practiced dentistry, he was a publisher and a seller of song books, he was an inventor and a merchant; he built a successful powder mill, and he was the first man in this country to smelt copper ore and to refine and roll copper into bolts and sheets.

But, although few Americans may know of Paul Revere in any of these roles, few indeed are they who do not know of him as a courier bearing "a word that shall echo forever more!" For it was his famous "midnight ride" in April of 1775, which warned the patriots of the approach of the British and rallied them to make their stand at Lexington and at Concord, where "the shot heard round the world" was fired.

On the day that Paul Revere celebrated his tenth birthday, there was born on a farm in Chester county, Pa., another boy who was destined to achieve even greater fame in the great struggle for liberty. Anthony Wayne was his name, and when he grew to young manhood he became as well known as a surveyor in Pennsylvania as Washington was in Virginia. He attracted the attention of Benjamin Franklin who had him appointed to look after the interests of a number of Philadelphia business men who owned lands in Nova Scotia. Upon his return from this work in 1767 he married Polly Penrose, the daughter of a prominent Philadelphia merchant, and they settled in Chester county where young Wayne made a good living as a farmer and surveyor.

In 1774 he was made one of the provincial deputies and he was also a member of the Pennsylvania convention held at Philadelphia to discuss the impending trouble between the colonies and the mother country. But Anthony Wayne was a man of action, not merely a man of words, and New Year's day of 1776 found him at his home, Waynesborough, impatiently awaiting word from Philadelphia, where the Pennsylvania committee of safety was about to choose the colonels for the four battalions, which were to be sent to the aid of General Washington and his Continentals before Boston. Unable to restrain his impatience, Wayne, two days later, bade his Polly and their children a hasty good-by and set out for Philadelphia, there to learn that he had been appointed colonel of the first battalion.

So the military career of Anthony Wayne began and how brilliant that career was is told in one of the most interesting biographies of recent months—Thomas Boyd's "Mad Anthony Wayne," published by Charles Scribners' Sons. No better characterization of Wayne can be given than in the scene, as Boyd describes it, which took place after the long, bitter winter at Valley Forge when Washington summoned his generals to a council to decide whether or not to allow the British, who were preparing to leave Philadelphia for New York, to pass across New Jersey unmolested. Gen. Charles Lee spoke longest and loudest and his advice was to let the British alone. Then:

Anthony Wayne had sat apart, holding a book beyond which he had looked with bright-eyed scorn as ten of his fellow officers had agreed with Charles Lee. He raised his head.

"Well, general," asked his Excellency, "what do you propose to do?"

Wayne answered quickly, "Fight, sir!"

But that reply could scarcely have surprised the commander-in-chief or any of the others. For when hadn't the leader of the Pennsylvania line voted in favor of attack? At Brandywine? At Germantown? At White Marsh last November? Never. Attack, attack! It was the only word he knew.

And those two words "attack" and "fight" were the keynotes of his whole career, both in the Revolution and during the Indian war afterwards. It would have been appropriate if he could have died on the field of battle. Instead, he was stricken by illness in December of 1796 at the fort at Presque isle on the shores of Lake Erie, and there after great suffering the end came on December 15.

. . He had hoped for many more years; only fifty-two he would be if he kept on till January. . . But he had no desire to keep on until January; not like this. He could think neither of past joys nor regrets. His life with Polly, the glory of Monmouth and Stony Point, his maddening experiences with the Georgia plantation, that election to congress which began in good faith and ended close to humiliation, his victory at the Fallen Timber and his greater triumph at Greenville—these things were all of equal indifferences to him now. Even if he had known of the years to come, that many of his forts would grow into cities, that there would be Wayne counties, Wayne townships, Waynesvilles and Waynesburgs throughout America, that a century later youths of the country he had won from the Indians and British would feel strong with valor at evocation of his name—even had he fully known the achievements that had been his they would have been as nothing then, for his suffering was great and more than he could withstand.

Nevertheless there was one thought that came into his death-conscious mind; some time before ten minutes past two of the morning of that cold December 15 the general separated his twisted lips to say, "Bury me at the foot of the flagstaff, boys,"—which doubtless was as close to home as if he had died at Waynesborough.

The third member of the trilogy of Revolutionary notables who had New Year's day as their birthday was a woman. Born on January 1, 1752, Elizabeth Griscom of Philadelphia, was married to John Ross, a Philadelphia merchant, who was also an upholsterer. His most able assistant was his wife who had become widely known for her excellent materials and the unusual skill with which she shaped them. She carried on the business after his death and employed a dozen or more women assistants, some of them her sisters, daughters, or nieces.

Among her patrons were the foremost citizens of Philadelphia and she numbered among her friends such men as Washington, Franklin, Adams and Rittenhouse. So perhaps it was natural that when the Continental congress on June 14, 1777, "Resolved, that the flag of the thirteen United States be thirteen stripes alternate red and white; that the Union be thirteen stars, white on a blue field, representing a new constellation," the committee which was appointed to carry out this resolution should go to "the widow Ross" to have her make it for them. Whether or not Betsy Ross designed the first Stars and Stripes or whether that honor belongs to Francis Hopkinson of New Jersey is a matter for dispute among historians. At any rate Betsy Ross seems to have been connected in some way with the early history of our national banner and the "Betsy Ross legend," if legend it be, seems to be firmly fixed in our national tradition of the origin of our flag.

There is one event connected with the flag which took place on January 1, however, which is undisputed. That is the fact that on January 1, 1776, Gen. George Washington raised over his camp at Cambridge, Mass., a flag which, although it had the Union Jack in the canton, had the thirteen alternate red and white stripes, representing the thirteen colonies. This flag was referred to in the correspondence of the day as the "American colors," and may safely be regarded as the first American flag. Since the thirteen colonies represented in the thirteen stripes, although fighting for their rights, had not yet broken entirely away from the mother country, the British Union Jack was retained to show their connection with England. Six months later, however, the ties which bound them were severed by the Declaration of Independence, and then the need for a new banner resulted in the doing away with the Union Jack. Then came the historic resolution of June 14, 1777, the stars were placed in the canton and the flag of the United States became the Stars and Stripes.

On January 1, 1800, there was born at Wallingford, Conn., a man who was destined to become an important figure in American journalism and to introduce an innovation which was to be the forerunner of one of the most important factors in our modern newspapers. For it was Moses Yale Beach who conceived the idea of speedy transmission of news which resulted ultimately in the founding of the Associated Press, the greatest news gathering organization in the world. A cabinet maker, inventor and paper-mill owner in his youth, the turning point in Beach's career came in 1821 when he married a sister of Benjamin Day, founder of the New York Sun. In 1835 he purchased an interest in that paper and later became its proprietor. Beach brought to the Sun original methods for securing the first tidings of important events. Express trains were run between various points at his expense, and before the telegraph was invented he used carrier pigeons to bring early European news from incoming steamers, as well as from political gatherings, race tracks, etc. During the Mexican war, finding the means of transmitting news so slow, he established a "pony express" system of couriers which reduced the time by one-third. Laying the matter before his fellow publishers a form of a co-operative alliance was worked out which was a forerunner of the modern Associated Press.

The War of 1812 saw another important event taking place on New Year's day. For it was on January 1, 1815, that the British made their first attack on New Orleans, and a week later occurred the decisive engagement in which "Old Hickory" Jackson so decisively defeated Pakenham's veterans.

On January 1, 1822, the first American settlers arrived in Texas, an event which forecast the struggle for a second war of independence in North America and the the addition of the Great Southwest to the United States. On January 1, 1831, William Lloyd Garrison, the Abolitionist, published the first issue of the Liberator, the paper which was to have so great an influence in the slavery dispute. And what Garrison started on January 1, 1831, was finished by Abraham Lincoln 32 years later. On January 1, 1863, his historic emancipation proclamation went into effect, and the death blow to slavery in the United States was struck.

LONG SKIRTS BRING CHANGES; METAL LACE FOR DANCE

THERE'S sure lots of excitement in the style realm these days. It seems that new fashions will insist on being old fashions or is it the other way round—old fashions insisting on becoming new fashions? Anyway, the revival of long skirts and short waists has about caused a near panic in the mind of the woman who insists she won't wear the down-to-the-ankle hemlines and she will keep her "bob" no matter how long others let their hair grow, and it's been a regular tussle between Dame Fashion and her followers up to now. However, Mistress Fashion seems to be scoring another triumph, which is not at all surprising, for her record has ever been one of victory.

Arguments on both sides are good. Those on the negative side begin by saying that the chief aim of woman is to look as youthful as clothes and beauty parlors can make one look, and that the long skirts add years to one's appearance, besides they are not practical. So there!

Those in favor of the new silhouette talk along lines of clothes psychology, declaring that the long, graceful skirts, the slenderizing princess lines and form-fitting bodices, the elegancies of detail all tend to create an air of refinement, a charm, a delightsome femininity, a ladylike demeanor on the part of the wearer which is truly fascinating. So there you are, or rather, I should say, where are you!

There's no doubt about the charm-

Attention is called to the elbow sleeves which style this gown. Just as womankind is trying its best to become reconciled to skirts that go down and waistlines that go up, along come elbow sleeves to be reckoned with, and, would you believe it, tiny puff sleeves are "in" again for evening wear. Use Movietone Talkies in Recording Confessions

WIDE WORLD PHOTO

Movietone talkies of suspects and criminals were made for the first time in Philadelphia. It is the idea of Director of Safety Lemuel Schofield to have talkies made of suspects so that when the trial comes up the talkies can be shown and the confessions of the criminal also recorded by themselves, so that no prisoner can say he was tricked into confession. Photograph shows a general view of the interior of the detective bureau where the talkies were made.

Some Seasonable Foods

By NELLIE MAXWELL

Good housekeeping is not necessarily good home making. Spotless floors may grace a house not a home. Real living means comfort, happiness and growth.

NOW that the rosy cranberry is in the market, a salad which will be different may be prepared.

Cranberry Salad.

Take one envelope of gelatin, dissolve in one-fourth cupful of cold water, one and three-fourths cupfuls of boiling water, one-fourth teaspoonful of salt and two tablespoonfuls of lemon juice. Chop two cupfuls of cranberries, add one cupful of celery finely minced and one and one-half cupfuls of sugar. Mold and serve with any good dressing.

Combination Salad.

Take one cupful of chopped cabbage, one-half cupful each of diced apple and pineapple, shredded almonds and marshmallows. Mix the ingredients with one-fourth teaspoonful of salt and add a boiled dressing, using the pineapple juice instead of vinegar. Garnish with whipped cream, sprinkled with almonds.

Orange and Coconut Salad.

Cover six oranges with boiling water and let them stand for ten minutes. Remove from the hot water and chill in cold water for ten minutes. Remove the rind and cut the fruit into thin circular slices. Arrange in overlapping slices, garnish with cherries and sprinkle with coconut. Cover with french dressing and when serving add a spoonful of mayonnaise.

Pot-Au Feu.

Take one pound of rump beef, one-half knuckle of veal, add to two quarts of boiling water with salt and pepper. Cook 20 minutes, then add two turnips, one tomato, one onion, one bunch of carrots, one stalk of celery and two potatoes. Cook slowly four hours. Remove the bones and cook a half hour longer. Let stand 20 minutes and serve.

Pecan Appetizers.

Brown a cupful or more of pecans in a teaspoonful of olive oil, stir until evenly browned, then dust with salt and a light sprinkling of cayenne.

Cheese Roll.

Chop one-quarter pound of Roquefort cheese and mix with one-fourth pound of cottage cheese, moisten with cream and mix well with one small bottle of stuffed olives chopped, add salt, cayenne and a few drops of onion juice. Roll in a small roll, serve on a cheese plate with knife.

Odd Harvest Festival Held in London Church

One of the most curious harvest festivals in existence is that held every year in the old city church of St. Dunstan in the East, near Bishopsgate, London, England. At this thanksgiving service 39 kinds of fish, equal to the number of the 39 articles of the Church of England, are displayed.

A brotherhood of fish, extending from the lordly salmon to the humble periwinkle, and including sole, eel, halibut, herring, cod, lobster, crab and oyster, are used to decorate the church, and fruits, tea, coffee, cocoa and wine also have an honored place.

This year a gigantic wheaten loaf more than four feet high, and a great emden goose were also of the company. All these are offerings from city merchants, and when the service is over they are sent to Guy's hospital, according to ancient custom.—Detroit News.

He Was Interested

A reporter and a photographer went to a Pittsburgh automobile agency to get a story and pictures. While they were there a man rushed in asking for a fire extinguisher, saying that a car outside was on fire. "C'mon," said the reporter to his carera man. "Maybe it's worth a picture." They went outside, where the whole landscape was lighted up by flames rapidly consuming a car. In true news-bound style the photographer began to do his stuff. He suddenly turned pale. "Hey—wait a minute!" he yelled, dancing toward the burning chariot. "That's my car." And so it was.

The Railroad to Be Given Away

By JEAN NEWTON

SOMETIME ago, if the news dispatches are to be taken seriously, officials of a western railroad offered to give a well-equipped slightly used and "unprofitable" hundred and fifty-eight-mile branch railroad to anyone who would operate it.

They were swamped with applications. Housewives, stenographers, carpenters, preachers, actresses, boys, business men and hoboes wanted the railroad which they could get for nothing.

An inventor wanted the railroad to test out his mechanical discoveries—a minister from Pennsylvania, a woman from Council Bluffs, Iowa, who wanted to give her relatives jobs on the trains, a Chicago mother who desired it for her seven-year-old son who was just out to be a railroad president! And a stenographer who gave as her qualifications that she was "young and not bad looking!"

Everybody, it seemed, in all walks of life, with all sorts of backgrounds, all sorts of hopes, desires and abilities, with varied reasons for wanting it, everybody wanted the railroad, and anybody would take it for nothing.

What none of these people thought of, apparently, was what they would do with it when they got it, how they would make good with the gift, how make it pay! All they thought of was getting something, taking. What they lost sight of was the fact that everything that we acquire brings with it problems, duties, responsibilities.

And so many people as they go through life are always willing to take, to acquire, without a thought for the accompanying responsibility that they are "taking on." That, it seems to me, is the cause for much of the disillusionment that people suffer. They accept eagerly possessions, position, ties, and when they are brought face to face with the price, the obligations to which they have unwittingly committed themselves, they are astonished at the "strings" tied to their bargain.

For my part, I make no application for the railroad that is to be given away free.

London's Old Coffee Houses

In London the first coffee houses were, so to speak, clubhouses free to all who could buy a cup of coffee; and yet each was known for its special circle of visitors, literary, scientific, religious or political. In the absence of newspapers they were a great means of spreading news and of discussing public questions. Nearly all of the middle and higher classes attended them daily, and they came to exert a powerful influence in politics.

A superlative care for right doing is the one thing needful. You find it when behavior is in harmony with the steady voice of conscience.—Carlyle.

TO KEEP A ROSE

By Douglas Malloch

A ROSE within a crystal glass,
A rose to wither and to pass;
Its beauty fades, its glory goes—
I know no way to keep a rose.

And yet there is a rose that blooms
Forever in quiet rooms,
A rose within a fairer vase
Than purchased in the market place.

The rose is love, the vase the home,
A rose that blossoms when we roam
And when return, one rose God made
That need not wither, need not fade.

And yet to keep that one rose fair
The heart must also give it care,
Must nurture it with things like this:
The morning smile, the good-night kiss.

Aye, this is all this red rose needs;
Words of affection, helpful deeds,
Labors divided, burdens shared,
And eyes that look as though they cared.

The rose of love will bow its head
In rooms where angry words are said,
That rose will brave the wintry sky,
But when hearts chill that rose will die.

If you the rose of love possess,
Keep it alive with gentleness,
And crystal pure with tender hands
The vase called home in which it stands.

There is one rose, the rose of love,
You need not know the fading of
A rose that, watered day by day,
You never need to throw away.

Virtue to Vice

Julius Rosenwald, the millionaire philanthropist, in an address in Chicago advocated short hours and long vacations.

"I love work," he said. "All successful people love it. It is one of the best things in the world. Yet work must not be carried to excess.

"Work, carried to excess, from being a virtue becomes a vice, just as four aces in a card game fill every heart with admiration, while five cause all manner of trouble, hatred and turmoil."

Black Pessimism

"Our Japanese bravery is perhaps due to Japanese pessimism," said Ojiro Oyama, Japanese consul to San Francisco.

Trouble in Bunches

By M. K. THOMPSON, Ph. D.

TROUBLE always comes in bunches. It never rains but it pours," and these expressions are based on the keen observation that when a man makes a mistake it is likely to be followed by many more.

In any aviation camp they will tell you that if one man has an accident it is likely to be followed by a bunch of accidents. It seems to effect the nerves of the whole camp. The men expect trouble and sure enough it is forthcoming. Trouble never disappoints one who is looking for it.

Many doubt the loss of confidence and the general attitude of expectancy seem to bring about the disastrous results. All this is based on the fundamental psychological law that an idea, a strong fear or expectancy materially affects the muscles and nerves despite every conscious effort you may make to the contrary.

Why trouble comes in bunches because we sometimes magnify the little things into troubles to get the thrill of self pity. The negro spiritualist song expresses it in the phrase "Nobody knows de troubles I've seen." There is a tendency to magnify our ill luck in order to excuse failure and incompetency and to get the compensation of self pity.

Troubles come in bunches because after a severe jolt one is less able to carry on as normal. He falls below par mentally, physically and emotionally. No one knows this any better than a professional boxer. After stopping a hard punch with his chin he feels wabbly and trouble piles up fast through any mysterious bunching of trouble, but because he is weakened by the hard blow and is less able to carry on.

The chief reason why trouble seems to come in bunches is that the first blow weakens the man so that he falls an easy prey to whatever may come his way.

Devised Pedometer

John Fischer, a London mechanic, invented the first pedometer nearly 150 years ago. His patent, sealed on June 17, 1783, was for "a geometrical and pedometrical watch which not only answers the purpose of a common watch, but is also distinguished by showing on the dial every step the walker makes and by measuring the distance."

A combined pedometer and watch of this type made a few years later, but not by Fischer, is in the South Kensington museum in London.—London Tit-Bits.

First Department Store

Brigham Young, the Mormon leader, should be regarded as one of the originators of the modern department store. In 1868 he established the Zion's Co-operative Mercantile institution at Salt Lake City. This store, generally known as the Z. C. M. I., now does an annual business of more than $12,000,000 in a city having a population less than 150,000. It employs about 1,000 persons. People living in neighboring states go for hundreds of miles to shop at the store founded by Brigham Young.

Aurelian Philosophy

Deem not life a thing of consequence. For look at the yawning void of the future and at that other limitless space, the past.—Marcus Aurelius Antoninus (121-180 A. D.) "Meditations."

"Now that married women are so quick on the trigger," says Ironical Irene, "girls seem to take husbands for better or hearse."

LIGHTHOUSE ADVENTURES

PART IV

"I stood at the stern near the helmsman, watching the lighthouse until it finally completely vanished.

"The boat rode the waves buoyantly, dipping and rising with the swells, dragging behind it the seine boat that was used for spreading the net to catch mackerel. I was fascinated by the medley of noises that were strange to me, the sucking sound as the bow slapped into a furrow of the waves, and the creaking of the blocks and braces.

"One of my new friends taught me to tell time by the ship's bell. While we were listening, it struck eight times. This meant it was four o'clock. Half-past was one bell, and he told me that when four bells came I could have my supper. But long before that time I was down in the galley, watching the cook prepare the food. I ate with the sailors, and relished their fare of corned beef and hard tack. They made much of me, joking and pretending to consider me one of them. Though I was shy among so many strangers, I enjoyed their rough, kindly talk and could have listened to it forever.

"But soon after supper I realized that I was very tired. One of the men offered me his bunk. He could sleep just as well on the floor, he said. And in spite of the narrowness and hardness of my bed and the lurching of the boat, I soon fell fast asleep.

"When I awoke the next morning we were in quiet water. I could hear the captain on deck shouting orders to his men. I ran out into the cool morning light and found that we were about to come to dock, although most of our canvas was still spread. On the pier a small crowd of people was gathered to meet us. Just as it seemed that we were about to crash into the pier, the boat made a sharp turn and we came up broadside. The hawsers were flung, and caught by the men on shore who made them fast to the piles. We were in Boston.

"I was eager to land, but it seemed I must wait until the business of unloading was done. All hands must work to get the perishable fish to market as quickly as possible. The barrels were rolled over the dock side and hoisted up by derricks to the wharf, where they were loaded onto carts.

"When Eric was cleaned up and ready to go on shore I climbed the ladder to the dock. There a great many people were talking and shouting to each other. Draymen were backing their carts up to take on barrels of fish. The owners of the ship were bargaining with tradesmen. Fishermens' families were down to meet their relatives. I was bewildered, and clung closely to Eric as he led me along the cluttered wharf into the stone-paved street.

"It was still early in the morning. The street lay in shadow between the gray warehouses. Many carts rattled over the cobblestones with their loads of shining fish, green bananas, and golden figs from Italy.

"I was so bewildered by the many new things at which to look that my eyes were everywhere. I scarcely noticed when Eric suggested that he leave me to find my way alone. 'Keep right on as you are going now,' he said. 'The next wharf is Commercial Wharf, and there you will find your store.'

"I was perfectly willing to go by myself, though sorry to say good-by to Eric. We shook hands and parted.

"I walked along on the inside dock. A fleet of white-sailed ships came in one after another, coasting between the crooked wharves to come to anchor nearby. Forgetting for the moment my important errand, I stood watching them, and was so absorbed that it was not until I felt a sharp tug at my elbow that I came out of my dreams, and turned to find a ragged boy standing beside me.

University Park Property Sales Are Growing

University Park is experiencing sales owing to the location of the big golf links across the creek from the property. The links are sponsored by Stanford University and are the largest course in the west. The park is a portion of the Fitzpatrick estate and was one of the first subdivisions in the county. The holding is very valuable. It is the only land available near the links.

Warm Rains Produce Mushrooms

The warm rains of this week has caused mushrooms to fairly pop out of the ground. The fungus is being gathered by all local residents in bucket fulls. While the rain fall is little short of two inches it was sufficient to start the spawn.
